

Frequent Flyer Information

If your arrangements include air transportation on a regularly scheduled airline, you may want to register as a "frequent flyer." These programs earn points toward a free ticket for every mile that you fly. There is no cost to join.

Approximately four to six weeks after registering, you will receive your frequent flyer card and additional information about the program. In order to receive credit for each flight you make, present your card at the ticket counter when checking in on the day of departure and on the day of return.

Keep your boarding passes and the passenger copy of your ticket. Should the airlines not credit you for a flight, this information can be submitted as proof of travel.

Some airlines do not offer "frequent flyer" points on some of their group airfares. Contact your group travel consultant to check the status of your particular group.
